Throughout a legal career that spanned seven decades, Nathan Patz ’26 was known as a “lawyer’s lawyer,” respected for his brilliance and accomplishments, and revered for his principles, his honor, and his refusal to compromise in even the smallest way on any point of ethics.

A community leader who gave his time and wise counsel to numerous boards and organizations, Mr. Patz was appointed by three governors to the Maryland Judicial Disabilities Commission and served as president of the Bar Association of Baltimore.

Mr. Patz was a loyal supporter of the School of Law and the University of Maryland throughout his life. His many generous gifts through the decades include the establishment of the Nathan Patz Student Loan Fund and the Nathan Patz Law Library Fund at the School of Law. He also created the University of Maryland Regents Scholarship Fund in honor of his wife, Doris Patz.

In 1974, Mr. Patz served as president of the University of Maryland Alumni Association, and in 1977 he was president of the University of Maryland Alumni Association International. John Toll, former chancellor of the University System of Maryland, called him “an outstanding citizen of Maryland.”

Thanks to a contribution from the State of Maryland, and an unprecedented three-year fund raising effort by alumni and friends of the School of Law, the Nathan Patz Law Center was dedicated in September 2002.

The law school’s growth has been dramatic. Over the past decade, applications have surged as more than 4,000 applicants competed for 275 spots. The student body has grown increasingly diverse, attracting representatives from every state and more than a dozen nations. The school has introduced six new clinics and launched academic programs in dispute resolution, international law, intellectual property law, and women and leadership. Faculty scholarship has blossomed, with articles and books published by Oxford, Cambridge and other leading publishing houses.

Just as important, the challenge of raising funds to construct and furnish the Law Center created the nucleus of what has grown into a robust philanthropic community of support.
