AN INSIGHT INTO INSIDER TRADING IN GREATER CHINA

Greg Tzu Jan Yang*

TABLE OF CONTENTS

I. INTRODUCTION
   A. What kind of data constitutes as asymmetric information?
   B. Who is an insider?
       1. People connected with the company
          a. Directors
             Director’s fiduciary duty
          b. Officers and employees
          c. Professional or business relationships
       2. Government officials
   C. Does insider trading harm the market?
   D. Alternative arguments for insider trading
   E. Problem of enforcement
   F. Important Australian insider trading case
      Hannes case
      Mt. Kersey case

II. INSIDER TRADING IN HONG KONG
   A. Introduction
   B. Dealing in securities
   C. Prohibitions
   D. Insider dealing
   E. Validity of insider dealing
   F. Liability of officers
   G. Tribunal inquiry
   H. Penalty

III. INSIDER TRADING IN TAIWAN
   A. The regulation for insider trading in Taiwan
   B. The case of Taiwan Fertilizer
      A brief history
      Part 1
      Part 2
C. The case of Uni-President
   A brief history
   Comparison and analysis
D. The case of Hold Key Electric
   A brief history
E. The Inventec Appliances Corporation
   A brief history
F. BEBQ (now renamed to Qisda)
   A brief history
G. BAFO Technologies
   A brief history

IV. INSIDER TRADING IN CHINA
A. HUANG Guangyu insider trading case
   1. Seven deadly sins’ with 70 billion Yuan
   2. Gome’s speedy merger with Yongle
   3. Who is HUANG Guangyu?
B. Insider trading case for Xinjiang Tianshan Cement Ltd
   A brief history
   Part 1
   Part 2

V. CONCLUSION
A. Issues for Taiwan
B. Issues for China
C. Final words on regulatory framework of Taiwan and China

GLOSSARY

* Greg Tzu Jan Yang, SJD, Bond University, Australia. PhD, Peking University, China. Adjunct Professor of School of Law, Chinese Central Minority University. Lecturer of School of Law at Peking University and Tsinghua University.