INDONESIA BEYOND REFORMASI: NECESSITY AND THE “DE-CENTERING” OF DEMOCRACY

Leonard C. Sebastian, Jonathan Chen and Adhi Priamarizki*

TABLE OF CONTENTS

I. INTRODUCTION: TRANSITIONAL POLITICS IN INDONESIA ........................................... 2

II. NECESSITY MAKES STRANGE BEDFELLOWS: THE GLOBAL AND DOMESTIC CONTEXT FOR DEMOCRACY IN INDONESIA ........................................ 7

III. NECESSITY-BASED REFORMS ...................... 12
   A. What Necessity Inevitably Entailed: Changes to Defining Features of the New Order ............ 12
      1. Military Reform: From Dual Function (Dwifungsi) to NKRI ................................. 13
      2. Taming Golkar: From Hegemony to Political Party ................................................. 21
      3. Decentralizing the Executive and Devolution to the Regions ..................................... 26
      4. Necessary Changes and Beyond: A Reflection . 31

IV. NON NECESSITY-BASED REFORMS ............. 32
   A. After Necessity: A Political Tug of War ........... 32
      1. The Evolution of Legislative Elections ......... 33
      2. The Introduction of Direct Presidential Elections ..................................................... 44
         a. The 2004 Direct Presidential Elections ... 47
         b. The 2009 Direct Presidential Elections ... 48
      3. The Emergence of Direct Local Elections .... 50

V. 2014: A WATERSHED ................................. 55

* Leonard C. Sebastian is Associate Professor and Coordinator, Indonesia Programme at the Institute of Defence and Strategic Studies, S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies, Nanyang Technological University, Republic of Singapore

Jonathan Chen is an Associate Research Fellow, Indonesia Programme at the Institute of Defence and Strategic Studies, S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies, Nanyang Technological University, Republic of Singapore

Adhi Priamarizki is an Associate Research Fellow, Indonesia Programme at the Institute of Defence and Strategic Studies, S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies, Nanyang Technological University, Republic of Singapore

The writers would like to extend their gratitude to Keoni Indrabayu Marzuki and Tiola for their insightful contributions.
A. The Rise Of The Local .......................... 55
   1. Events Leading up to Joko Widodo’s
      “Working Cabinet” ............................ 56
   2. A Commoner Amongst Elites .............. 62
   3. Revisiting Necessity and the Evolution of the
      Post-Reformasi Indonesian Polity .......... 68

VI. CONCLUSION: WHAT KIND OF DEMOCRACY
IS INDONESIA? .................................... 74
GLOSSARY ........................................ 78

Table 1: 1999 Indonesian People’s Representatives Council
(DPR) Elections Result ............................. 34
Table 2: 2004-2009 Parliament Seats .............. 38
Table 3: 2009-2014 Parliament Seats ................ 41
Table 4: First Round of the 2004 Direct Presidential Elections .............................. 48
Table 5: Second Round of the 2004 Direct Presidential Elections .............................. 48
Table 6: 2009 Presidential Elections Result .......... 49
Table 7: 2014-2019 Parliament Seats ................ 59
Table 8: 2014 Presidential Elections Result .......... 60
Table 9: The Widodo’s Administration’s “Working Cabinet”
Line-Up ........................................... 64
Table 10: The Merah Putih Coalition and Indonesia Hebat
Coalition seats at the Provincial Level .......... 71