MARYLAND LAW REVIEW PRESENTS

Truth Decay: Deep Fakes and the Implications for Privacy, National Security, and Democracy

In recent years, emerging technologies have allowed for the widespread creation and diffusion of hyper-realistic digital falsification of images, video, and audio, also referred to as “deep fakes.” Deep fakes are the tip of a very destructive iceberg, and they will be increasingly difficult to debunk. Soon it will be impossible to know if what your eyes and ears are telling you is true.

This symposium widens the aperture to explore the full array of implications that deep fakes have on our society. We will explore a number of questions: What happens as the boundary between truth and falsity dissipates into little more than a subjective illusion? What can law, media, companies, and society do to protect democratic principles, individual reputations, national security, free expression, and intellectual property? How can individuals and online users contribute to the protection of crucial democratic values?

This symposium will bring scholars and practitioners from around the nation to address the implications for privacy, free expression, national security, copyright, and many more issues.

Financial consideration for the Maryland Law Review Symposium has been graciously provided by Microsoft Corporation.

Background:
Motivated by the 2012 tragedy in Sandy Hook and multiple tragedies that have occurred in the ensuing years, what has become known as the Hartford Consensus was convened to bring together leaders from law enforcement, the federal government, and the medical community to improve survivability from manmade or natural mass casualty events. The resulting injuries from these events generally present with severe bleeding which, if left unattended, can result in death. The participants of the Hartford Consensus concluded that by providing first responders (law enforcement) and civilian bystanders the skills and basic tools to stop uncontrolled bleeding in an emergency situation, lives would be saved. The first responder program has received very good response and is widely being used across the country. The next step is to focus on needs of civilian bystanders.

Need:
 Civilians need basic training in Bleeding Control principles so they are able to provide immediate, frontline aid until first responders are able to take over care of an injured person. Due to many situations, there may be a delay between the time of injury and the time a first responder is on the scene. Without civilian intervention in these circumstances, preventable deaths will occur.

Mission/Objective:
The American College of Surgeons Committee on Trauma is leading the effort to save lives by teaching the civilian population to provide vital initial response to stop uncontrolled bleeding in emergency situations. This will be accomplished by the development of a comprehensive and sustainable bleeding control education and information program targeted to civilians that will inform, educate and empower the 300 million citizens of the United States.

JUST ASK A LAW LIBRARIAN, AND SAVE TIME.
The Summer Program in The Hague offers students a unique opportunity to live and learn at the heart of the international justice community. In 1899, the world’s first Peace Conference took place here. Currently, The Hague is home to more than 150 international legal organizations. Participants examine critical issues in international law and spend a month in the “International City of Peace and Justice” among the practitioners, courts, and tribunals that are making history today. Students are housed in spacious apartments in the center of The Hague, close to a variety of prominent Dutch landmarks such as the Peace Palace.

The Program is the product of collaboration between the War Crimes Research Office of American University Washington College of Law (AUWCL) — established to promote the development and enforcement of international criminal and humanitarian law — and the T.M.C. Asser Institute, one of the most prominent research institutes of international law in Europe.

COURSES

International Criminal Law: In Search of Accountability provides an introduction to international criminal law and explores the various ways in which national, international, and so-called “hybrid” criminal courts and tribunals have attempted to enforce criminal responsibility for serious violations of human rights and humanitarian law.

International Legal Approaches to Terrorism in the 21st Century examines counter-terrorism measures from an international and comparative law perspective and considers the interrelationship between these measures and the obligations of states under international human rights and humanitarian law. In addition to AUWCL faculty members, instructors include judges, prosecutors, and other staff from the International Court of Justice (ICJ), the International Criminal Court (ICC), the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY), the T.M.C. Asser Institute, and other organizations.

ACTIVITIES

Integral to the program are visits to international tribunals and legal institutions, including the ICJ, ICC, and ICTY, where students have an opportunity to observe proceedings and speak to practitioners in the field. The program also includes a networking panel with practitioners in international criminal law. Participants will also have the opportunity to visit Amsterdam, and can use their other free weekends for trips to other parts of Europe.

INTERNSHIPS

Many students secure an internship after the program. For instance, students have interned with ICTY defense teams, the ICC, the Special Tribunal for Lebanon, and the International Bar Association’s 100 Monitoring Programme.

Semester: Spring 2019
Office Hours: By appointment
Format: TRADITIONAL
Class Room: TBD
Class Room: Seven (7) consecutive Thursday evenings
6:00-8:00pm; First session: January 31, 2019
Campus: Baltimore

This is an IPE course, open to students from all schools on the UMB and USG campus.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Intimate partner violence (IPV) is a significant societal problem, which has persisted despite efforts to eradicate it using numerous intervention strategies. In this course, the student will be introduced to key concepts, processes, measurements, and related theories across diverse practice settings (i.e., social work, law, nursing, pharmacy, dentistry, and medicine) to be able to effectively address IPV in practice. Issues related to those who experience and witness IPV as well as those who perpetrate IPV, including social and cultural factors (e.g., race, ethnicity, socioeconomic status) associated with IPV, including theory practice on intersectionality. The student will explore various strategies established for ending IPV and clinical, policy, and social change interventions from an interprofessional perspective. Course activities will be designed to help the student think critically and apply understanding of theories of the individual to macro levels of intervention and change cross practice settings in social work, law, nursing, pharmacy, dentistry, and medicine.
