Class Room: TBD
Class Room: Seven (7) consecutive Thursday evenings
6:00-8:00pm; First session: January 31, 2019
Campus: Baltimore

This is an IPE course, open to students from all schools on the UMB and USG campus.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Intimate partner violence (IPV) is a significant societal problem, which has persisted despite efforts to eradicate it using numerous intervention strategies. In this course, the student will be introduced to key concepts, processes, measurements, and related theories across diverse practice settings (i.e. social work, law, nursing, pharmacy, dentistry, and medicine) to be able to effectively address IPV in practice. Issues related to those who experience and witness IPV as well as those who perpetrate IPV, including social and cultural factors (e.g., race, ethnicity, socioeconomic status) associated with IPV, including theory practice on intersectionality. The student will explore various strategies established for ending IPV and clinical, policy, and social change interventions from an interprofessional perspective. Course activities will be designed to help the student think critically and apply understanding of theories from the individual to macro levels of intervention and change a cross practice settings in social work, law, nursing, pharmacy, dentistry, and medicine.
