Friday, March 6, 2020

Presented by the Women’s Bar Association of Maryland

Co-sponsored by the University of Maryland Carey School of Law’s Moser Ethics in Action Initiative and its Women, Leadership and Equality Program
The Women’s Bar Association of Maryland is committed to the full and equal participation of women in the legal profession and in a just society. The WBA believes that a strong community of women in the legal profession is essential to the administration of justice. The WBA will promote women to positions of influence and leadership in their workplaces, the legal profession, the judiciary, and their communities. The WBA raises awareness and fight biases against women within the community at large, the legal profession, and under the law; promotes diversity, equality, and justice under the law and within the legal system; supports women in the legal profession in their personal and professional lives; provides opportunities for volunteerism and advocacy on issues affecting women; collaborates with other individuals and organizations to improve the status of women; celebrates the individual and collective achievements of women in the legal profession; and promotes full and equal participation of women in society by eliminating all forms of discrimination.

The Moser Ethics in Action Initiative at the University of Maryland Francis King Carey School of Law, with generous support from the Moser Family Philanthropic Fund, has taken a leadership role in addressing attorney ethics and the profession’s failure to effectively address the access to justice crisis in this country. The Initiative incorporates ethics and professionalism into the law school curriculum, conducts outreach to the profession, and provides opportunities to students to become involved in projects that advance access to justice.

The Women, Leadership and Equality Program at the University of Maryland Carey School of Law combines teaching, experiential learning, and scholarship about women in the legal profession to prepare its graduates to become leaders in their chosen careers. It is the first and the only one of its kind at an American law school. The Program provides an opportunity for students to engage in critical thinking about cutting-edge issues in gender and leadership. It seeks to produce lawyers, both male and female, who are aware of the barriers that face women and actively seek to advance women in the profession.

Advancing Equal Access to Justice by Challenging Gender Bias in the Legal Profession: What’s Next?

Current headlines and journal articles reflect continuing concern for gender bias in the legal profession and the need for education to overcome such obstacles to equal access to justice. Symposium panelists will explore: the import of judicial and attorney ethics codes prohibiting discrimination; professional and pragmatic concerns of women in Maryland courts and in law practice; and progress on gender equality initiatives announced thirty years ago with the Report on Gender Bias in the Courts.

The morning panels will focus on fearing, avoiding, identifying, and challenging judicial and attorney misconduct. What behaviors implicate ethics rules and concerns for incivility? What complaints and rules violations in state and federal courts prompt investigatory process?

Afternoon panelists will address and lead breakout discussions to explore: reasons for women departing the profession; identification of gender and intersectional bias issues; utility of rules and rule-making to challenge gender-related bias; and gender violence consequence in access to justice. Reports of panelists and reports from breakout discussions will encourage Symposium participants to identify next steps to eliminate gender bias in our courts and the legal profession.

The Symposium is presented by the Women’s Bar Association of Maryland, Inc. and co-sponsored by the University of Maryland Carey School of Law’s Moser Ethics In Action Initiative and its Women, Leadership and Equality Program, with many thanks to the Events Staff at the School of Law.

Challenging Gender Bias and Inequality in the Legal Profession

In May 1989, the Maryland Special Joint Committee on Gender Bias in the Courts issued its Report after two years of study. One significant objective of the Report’s recommendations was accomplished in the mid-1990’s upon amendment of the Judicial Canons (judicial ethics rules) to condemn gender bias. Maryland Rule 18-102.3 now requires:

“In the performance of judicial duties, a judge shall not, by words or conduct, manifest bias, prejudice, or harassment based upon race, sex, gender, religion, national origin, ethnicity, disability, age, sexual orientation, marital status, socioeconomic status, or political affiliation. A judge shall require attorneys in proceedings before the court, court staff, court officials, and others subject to the judge’s direction and control to refrain from similar conduct.”

The Court of Appeals added Rule 8.4(e) to the Lawyers Rules of Professional Conduct in 2005. Maryland Rule 19-308.4 now instructs:

“It is professional misconduct for an attorney to…knowingly manifest by words or conduct when acting in a professional capacity bias or prejudice based upon race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation or socioeconomic status when such action is prejudicial to the administration of justice.”

Now, 30 years later, we continue to read front page headlines in the Maryland Daily Record: “Gender inequality still persists in legal profession, report says”. The article describes an ABA report as identifying ‘gender-related issues hampering women’s careers in the legal profession’. The report (“Walking Out the Door: The facts, figures and future of experienced lawyers in private practice”, by co-author Bobbi Liebenberg) is described in an ABA Journal article close on the heels of three other recent Journal articles:

- “Inclusion Illusion”, offering a harsh example that ‘minority women continue to be the most drastically underrepresented in U.S. law firms’;
- “Protecting the Courts”, cautioning that ‘unfair attacks on judges undermine judicial independence’;
- “Defusing Bullies”, urging a ‘pledge to be civil’ and explaining that ‘lawyer speech triggers both civility and constitutional concerns’;
- “Federal judge reprimanded for ‘very serious’ long-term [sexual harassment] misbehavior…”

These current headlines reinforce the timeliness and import of our Symposium to address: “Advancing Equal Access to Justice by Challenging Gender Bias in the Legal Profession: What’s Next?”

The Symposium is structured to inform attendees about recognizing and addressing gender-related misconduct in the legal profession; identifying available tools to combat overt discriminatory bias or to recognize implicit bias; taking steps contemplated for the bench and at the bar to identify and responding to problematic gender-related behaviors; and identifying legislative, rule-making, or employer-driven initiatives to address gender inequality and its consequences.

Thank you for your attention and participation.
